Local MP slams health report's

WEASEL WORDS

Michelle Daw JOURNALIST

AFTER months of anticipation, the long-awaited Yorke Peninsula health services inquiry report has been released.

Its 16 recommendations include upgrading services at Wallaroo Hospital and developing emergency departments at Yorketown and Maitland Hospitals.

The Economic and Finance

Committee, which led the review, tabled the inquiry into Delivery of Health Services on the Yorke Peninsula report in the South Australian Parliament on Wednesday, September 17.

Other recommendations include expanding volunteer ambulance crews, introducing community-based mental health practitioners, and providing hospital support for emergency department mental health presentations.

Patient Assistance Transport Scneme to increase subsidies and make it easier to access, along with measures to attract and retain doctors, nurses and allied health staff.

Narungga MP Fraser Ellis said he was disappointed by the "underwhelming" language used in the report.

"Ultimately, there are far too many recommendations that the Government 'consider' or 'investi-

Proposals also cover changes to the gate' certain actions that arise out of the evidence," Mr Ellis said.

> "This is obviously tricky political language designed to give the government cover to weasel out of their obligations to our community.

> "The absolute weight of the overwhelming evidence showing that we need desperate investment in our regional health system should be listened to — not the political speak recommendations."

Mr Ellis said he had written to Health Minister Chris Picton urging him to adopt the substance of the recommendations in full.

It is expected the SA Government will give its formal response to the inquiry report at the next sitting week of SA Parliament, from October 14.

Mr Ellis urged YP residents and stakeholders to read the report.

A joy, not a burden

I WRITE in response the article, "For child safety, two sets of eyes are always better than one" (YPCT 9-9-25).

On behalf of those parents who stay at home with their children, and those who wish they could, I object to the portrayal by the author of daily life with children as being unpleasant or mind-numbing at best, or unsafe or unmanageable at worst.

Yes, the days are often long, but the years are so short! It seems that in the blink of an eye, children grow and become independent, are off at school or sport, and we are counting just how few years we have left with them before they fly the nest.

There are so many joys amidst the everyday with kids. Seeing their smiles; hearing them share something they've just learned; cuddling them when they're sleepy; providing comfort when they're sick; playing a game together; reading stories on the couch; seeing the world through their curious eyes.

May we treasure the time we have with these precious ones. It has been said, "Children are not a distraction from more important work. They are the most important work."

A lesson not learned

THE saying "learn by your mistakes" has never been more pointedly ignored. Hindsight, it seems, is cheap.

We are watching the planet go down the gurgler, with heartless greed ruining economies and destroying lives, while species extinction is at record levels.

Australia is the champion of species extinction, and it struts its gold medal for all

Meanwhile, the country is rushing into debt like an out-of-control freight train to build horribly toxic weapons without the remotest idea of how to deal with the radioactive (weapons-grade) waste they will produce when decommissioned, other than knowing it will have to be physically guarded for thousands of Sounds like a plan? Maralinga never happened? Maralinga, along with the Pacific tests, is measurable in every tree and every person living at the time of testing, world-wide.

This radioactive signature is used in forensic analysis. A case of before or after the world went mad.

So here we go again, ignoring the bitter lesson, blathering on that by building a risky military target in Adelaide, we are providing employment, and again, if we were attacked by a superpower, it would be by ballistic missiles.

Added to this is the new technology (sonar arrays/quantum sensing) rapidly emerging that will detect any disturbances in the ocean, turning apex predators (submarines) into billion-dollar coffins.

We'd be better off building a defensive shield (like Norway) if we are that paranoid.

So no, I'm happy to stare down the politicians who beguile us, spending the country's hard-earned billions on unfathomable schemes, treating the environment like a secondary consideration, meanwhile, happy to invite the world to our doorstep (COP31) to parade our so-called environmental credentials, hoping to win double gold.

Perhaps they could invite the delegates to dig up the mountain of sticky black mud that has throttled The Coorong since 1978? Or a day trip to Maralinga, a picnic, just for old times'

Don't fall for it.

Algal bloom: small businesses overlooked

DURING the COVID-19 pandemic, the travel industry faced unprecedented challenges.

Qantas received $2.7 billion in government support despite recording significant profits, while many Australian travel agents experienced financial hardship or closure.

Are we heading down the same path with the algal bloom disaster?

While commercial fishers and oyster growers have received limited assistance, there has been minimal attention or support directed towards the small businesses that underpin communities affected by the algal bloom.

Although the introduction of an algal bloom travel voucher is appreciated, it will be insufficient to address the broader challenges these businesses face.

Such measures can be likened to providing short-term relief at the onset of a longer-term

The sustainability of these enterprises is uncertain if holidaymakers do not return soon enough.

These businesses are integral to their communities; they employ staff, provide training to junior employees, and sponsor local sporting and community groups.

Without adequate support, the loss of these businesses could lead to reduced student enrolments in schools, fewer health professionals, diminished local employment opportunities and less community support.

While research funding continues to flow back into government initiatives, the immediate needs of small businesses on the ground are being overlooked, potentially threatening their future viability within these communities.

What the government does not understand is these small businesses are a very valuable asset to the local communities involved.

OUR VIEW

Too much wiggle room in report

THERE are plenty of welcome recommendations in the much-anticipated report from the parliamentary inquiry into health services on Yorke Peninsula, tabled in the South Australian Parliament last week.

The inquiry was conducted by the SA Parliament's powerful Economic and Finance Committee, comprising four Australian Labor Party members of parliament and three from the Liberal Party.

Its recommendations include upgrading services at Wallaroo Hospital, the development of emergency department facilities at Yorketown and Maitland hospitals, expanding volunteer ambulance crews, and investment in community-based mental health practitioners.

It sounds pretty good until you notice that nearly all the 16 recommendations are couched with qualifying words such as "consider", "investigate" and "explore".

The only unequivocal recommendation advises that Port Pirie Hospital be maintained with the Yorke and Northern Local Health Network, which will require no effort or expense from the SA Government to put into practice.

It appears the committee has given the SA Government a mighty get-out clause for enacting the other recommendations well within its scope.

If a year from now, nothing has changed in the provision of health care services in our region, the SA Government could still correctly claim it followed the recommendations, by merely considering, investigating or exploring them.

It's up to us as YP residents, stakeholders and health professionals, to put pressure on the current SA Government — and those who aspire to win next year's state election — to make critical improvements to health services for our growing and ageing population.

Pollie Pedal riders stop in Wallaroo

POLLIE Pedal, one of Australia's longest-running charity cycling events, will arrive in Wallaroo this afternoon (Tuesday, September 23) as part of its 2025 South Australia Ride for Veterans.

More than 30 riders - including Members of Parliament, veterans, community leaders and everyday Australians - are cycling 831 kilometres across the state to fundraise for Wandering Warriors, a not-for-profit organisation helping veterans transition to civilian life.

The group set off from Clare earlier in the day and will stay overnight in Wallaroo before continuing on to Port Pirie on Wednesday morning.

The week-long event began in Adelaide on Sunday, September 21, and will pass through Henley Beach, Largs Bay, Clare, Wallaroo, Port Pirie, Burra and Tanunda before finishing back in Adelaide via the Barossa Valley on Saturday, September 27.

Roadworks resume at Ardrossan's Hillside Project

THE next stage of roawdworks to support the Hillside Project near Ardrossan are scheduled to start this week, as Rex Minerals progresses development of its copper-gold op-

Stage 1 roadworks, including the realignment of a section of the Yorke

Highway, were completed earlier this year, with the new section of road opening to traffic in April.

Rex has contracted McMahon Services for the stage 2 roadworks, which comprise upgrading and realigning part of St Vincent Highway, including its intersection with Sandy Church Road.

"Most work will be done between 7am and 5pm, Monday to Friday, with some weekend work as required," a McMahon Services spokesperson said.

"Environmental controls will be in place to reduce impact on the surrounding area and the local community.

"A temporary bypass road will be constructed around the intersection of St Vincent Highway and Sandy Church Road to allow works to proceed, and all traffic will be diverted via the bypass.

"Sandy Church Road will remain accessible from St Vincent Highway during the works, until further notice."

Other works to support the development include construction of accesses over deep creek crossings and improvements to the Walk the Yorke trail between Pine Point and Rogues Point.

Nurses' Union and Narungga MP Fraser Ellis warn...

New nurse ratios could worsen country shortages

Michelle Daw JOURNALIST

MEMBER for Narungga Fraser Ellis and the nurses' union have welcomed progress on a bill to legislate nurse and midwife-to-patient ratios. Both, however, warn more action is needed to attract and retain staff in country hospitals.

- Fraser Ellis. Narungga MP

The Nurse and Midwife to Patient Ratios Bill passed the House of Assembly on September 19 and has now moved to the Legislative

Mr Ellis said the bill had an admirable aim — to improve conditions for nurses and raise levels of patient care. But he was concerned increased roles for nurses and midwives in metropolitan hospitals would make it harder to attract and retain staff in the country.

"My fear ... is it will become an impossible task for some regional hospitals to meet their legislative requirements and result in either the shutting of hospital doors or the failure of the Local Health Network to meet the legislative requirement that they are compelled to meet," Mr Ellis said.

In its submission to the parliamentary inquiry into YP health services, the Australian Nursing and Midwifery Foundation raised concerns that, despite emergency department presentations at Wallaroo Hospital rising 10.5 per cent since 2021, staffing levels had not increased to match demand.

Mr Ellis said he questioned what changes in nursing numbers would occur in country hospital wards.

"I can only fervently hope that increased incentives to entice staff to regional hospitals will follow to produce the desired outcomes.

"I will continue to especially push for more beds for our major facility at Wallaroo as classifications of staff ratios are to be calculated on bed numbers," he said.

"I was buoyed by the comments from Minister Picton today (September 18) that Wallaroo Hospital is expected to expand in line with expected growth of the Copper Coast and region, and very much hope that investment occurs soon."

ANMF South Australia chief executive, Adjunct Associate Professor Elizabeth Dabars AM, said if enacted, the bill would support safe staffing and patient care.

"The introduction of mandated nurse-to-patient ratios would be a safeguard for staff and patients, not a threat to service continuity," she said.

"Ratio legislation helps ensure that every shift is staffed appropriately, reducing the risk of burnout and improving the quality of care delivered.

"In country areas, where recruitment and retention have long been challenges, ratios provide a structural guarantee.

"Nurses and midwives can no longer be expected to work shortstaffed indefinitely.

"This legal protection fosters a more sustainable work environment, making rural and remote roles more attractive and viable in the long term."

The union, however, remained concerned about whether the workforce needed to meet the proposed requirements could be recruited and retained, particularly in rural and remote regions.

Prof. Dabars said the ANMF was calling for targeted rural and remote incentives in its log of claims under current Enterprise Bargaining Agreement negotiations with the SA Government.

"Post-COVID-19, there is a global shortage of nurses and midwives, and there are no longer untapped pools of skilled workers available for recruitment from interstate or overseas," she said.

"Rural and remote regions are disproportionately affected by the tight labour market.

While the last EBA saw some initiatives to attract employees to these areas, no measures were taken to support retention."

The ANMF log of claims includes extending the current zone allowance beyond five years of service, a $63.20 per shift allowance for employees who have upskilled in extra duties such as X-rays or facility management without an on-site medical officer, and government action to address housing and childcare shortages in rural and remote areas.

No change in ratios for YP hospitals

STAFFING ratios at the Wallaroo, Maitland and Yorketown hospitals would not change under the proposed new ratios being considered by the SA Parliament, according to the Australian Nursing and Midwifery Foundation South Australia chief executive, Adjunct Associate Professor Elizabeth Dabars AM.

Prof. Dabars said Wallaroo Hospital was listed as a category four facility.

Its general medical and surgical ward ratios would remain at one nurse for every six patients, plus a nurse in charge, on morning shifts; one nurse for every seven patients, plus a nurse in charge, on afternoon shifts; and one nurse for every 10 patients overnight.

pitals are classified as small hos- nurse for every four patients, plus pitals, and their staffing levels would continue with one registered nurse and one other nurse or midwife on all shifts.

Prof. Dabars said ANMF SA had secured a commitment from SA Health to review the staffing methodology for category four and small hospitals.

"The review will begin as soon as possible and be completed within six months," she said.

A spokesperson for SA Health said, under the proposed ratios, Adelaide's four largest metropolitan hospitals — the Royal Adelaide, Flinders, Lyell McEwin, and Women's and Children's -Maitland and Yorketown hos- would be required to have one a nurse in charge, in general medical and surgical wards for morning and afternoon shifts.

For night shifts, the ratio would be one nurse for every eight patients, plus a nurse in charge.

Other metropolitan hospitals would follow the same morning and night shift ratios, but for afternoon shifts the requirement would be one nurse for every five patients, plus a nurse in charge.

Antenatal wards in all public hospitals would require one midwife for every four patients during the day and one for every six patients overnight.

Nurse ratios to safeguard staff and patients, Minister says

HEALTH Minister Chris Picton care providers. says legislation now before the SA Parliament mandates safe staffing levels for patients, nurses and midwives and has been modelled on ratios in Victoria.

"We've already recruited more than 1460 additional nurses since being elected which will be a great help for our new ratios," he said.

Mr Picton said it was hoped the bill would pass through parliament and be enacted as legislation before the end of this year, with ratios to be applied early in 2026.

The legislation would cover specified patient care areas in the public health system and would not apply to private hospitals or private aged

A two-year rollout period would allow local health networks to reconfigure staffing and recruit as required. During that time, there would be a moratorium on non-compliance.

At the end of the moratorium, any deliberate or systematic breaches of the legislation as determined by the South Australian Employment Tribunal could attract a fine of up to $10,000.

Mr Picton said if there were any higher staffing requirements under the existing enterprise bargaining agreement in place for nurses and midwives, they would be retained when the new ratios were introduced.

Health inquiry urges Wallaroo upgrade, new EDs for Yorketown and Maitland

"WE should give the government the chance to adopt these recommendations but there is an election just around the corner and that's the best time to put pressure on politicians," he said.

"I will do my darndest to make sure both major parties have major improvements to our public hospitals on their agenda."

The inquiry was triggered by a petition launched by Mr Ellis in October 2022, which recorded more than 10,000 signatures enough to trigger a formal investigation and report to the SA Government for action.

The EFC began its inquiry in November 2024 with four terms of reference: the most appropriate classification of Wallaroo Hospital; Local Health Network coverage of Port Pirie Hospital; factors impacting the delivery of health services on YP, especially in relation to access and equity; and any other matter relating to health services on YP.

The committee received 86 submissions and conducted two hearings in Adelaide and one each at Yorketown and Wallaroo with 28 individuals and 12 organisations and stakeholders giving oral evidence, earlier this year.

The report notes that Yorke Peninsula has one of the largest regional populations in the state outside of metropolitan Adelaide with just over 30,000 people.

A submission by Barunga West, Copper Coast and Yorke Peninsula councils states YP is one of the few regional areas expected to grow at or near the statewide average over the next 20 years, with projected growth of 17.5 per cent by 2041.

The councils' submission also states Tourism SA figures show half a million people visited YP in 2023, and the mining project at Ardrossan is expected to be operational within the next few years, drawing more people to the region.

Foreword

In the report's foreword, EFC presiding member, Giles MP Eddie Hughes said one of the petition requests was to review the classification of Wallaroo Hospital as the primary hospital on YP.

Mr Hughes said most services at the hospital were resourced at level 2 or 3, with several submissions and witnesses calling for upgrades, particularly in the emergency de-

"It was also highlighted that some specialist services, such as a radiology, were not available at Wallaroo on a 24/7 basis," Mr Hughes wrote.

"Representatives from the (Yorke and Northern) Local Health Network told the committee that the plan was to establish Wallaroo as part of a triangular hub alongside hospitals in Port Pirie and Clare, with similar levels of service delivery," Mr Hughes said.

He also acknowledged there was a lack of personnel across the region, including doctors, nurses and allied health professionals.

"The Committee heard that incentives are needed to attract staff to the Yorke Peninsula, while also addressing workload and safety concerns amongst existing staff," Mr Hughes wrote.

"Distance on the Yorke Peninsula was raised as a significant issue during the inquiry, with many people choosing or needing to travel to Adelaide for treatment."

Mr Hughes also noted that many specialist services were limited on YP, including mental health services, antenatal and postnatal care, and palliative care.

Report recommendations

THE Economic and Finance Committee's 16 recommendations to the South Australian Government are:

- 1. Consider investment to upgrade services at Wallaroo Hospital, including increase in the number of beds and 24/7 on site radiology
- Maintain Port Pirie Hospital within the Yorke and Northern Local Health
- 3. Investigate options for development of emergency department facilities at Yorketown and Maitland Hospitals.
- 4. Call on the federal government to explore incentives for GPs to join or establish medical practices on the Yorke Peninsula.
- 5. Investigate methods for supporting the maintenance and possible expansion of the YNLHN's Rural Doctor Program.
- 6. Explore incentives for early career nurses and metropolitan-based nurses to relocate and work in the YNLHN, such as subsidised accommodation.
- Consider development of further training opportunities for nursing and allied health staff to increase specialist knowledge amongst health staff on YP.

- 8. Examine possible increases in subsidies provided by the Patient Assistance Transport Scheme, as well as decreasing the complexity of applying for subsidies via the scheme.
- 9. Explore possible changes to the Patient Assistance Transport Scheme to take into account continuity of care.
- 10. Explore options for expansion of volunteer ambulance crews in the
- 11. Call on the federal government to investigate investment in communitybased mental health practitioners and wellbeing hubs on YP.
- 12. Investigate investment in mental health support in hospitals to assist with mental health presentations at emergency departments.
- 13. Explore options for safety upgrades at hospitals to help protect staff and patients.
- 14. Consider the establishment of Child and Family Health Services across YP, particularly in towns in southern YP.
- 15. Investigate options for expanding palliative care services on YP.
- 16. Explore options for community support for digital health and telehealth services.

'Little wonders' on offer with travel vouchers

Sarah Herrmann JOURNALIST

TRAVEL vouchers are today being distributed to 20,000 lucky South Australians who entered the ballot for the Coast is Calling program.

More than 120,000 people applied for vouchers, according to the SA Government, after registration opened on Friday, September 19 and closed last night (Monday, September 22).

Over 230 tourism businesses impacted by the algal bloom are part of the program, with more than 500 experience and accommodation options on offer.

On Yorke Peninsula, this includes fishing charters, surfing lessons, gin tastings, holiday parks and glamping, a South Australian Tourism Commission spokesperson said.

Bayside Glamping owner Tiffany Falzon said her business was offering three two-night accommodation packages.

"For each package we chose to work with another local business that wasn't eligible (for the voucher program)," she said.

"In our glamping tent you get a cupcake box on arrival from Holy Cake at Warooka, our tiny house includes gin tasting with the gin from Lost Tide (in Stansbury), and The Sanctuary includes a breakfast and morning tea hamper from Hampers on Yorkes in Minlaton."

Ms Falzon said bookings for her Marion Bay business meant others, such as bakeries and cafes on the way down, would see tourist dollars too.

GETAWAY... Bayside Glamping at Marion Bay is one of the Yorke Peninsula businesses involved in the Coast Is Calling travel voucher program.

"We had the quietest winter on record," she said.

"When the algal bloom was in Marion Bay and it was bad on the beaches, we never had one guest complain, but when it hit the media that's when we got a big cancellation.

"Because we're not just a place to sleep, we're an experience in itself, even if it (the bloom) did come back, you don't even have to leave our places."

Arthurton's Sunny Hill Distillery is offering a behind-the-scenes production tour, guided liqueur and spirit tasting, and cheese and cocktail package.

"Because we are heavily reliant on tourism, we have noticed a decline, a flow-on effect from caravans not getting the visitors and therefore there are fewer visitors in the area going to places like us," owner Olivia Colliver said.

"Yorke Peninsula is not just a fishing and beach place, we've got lots of other little wonders on our leg to come and see."

Point Turton Caravan Park manager Dani Wheadon said the voucher travel period of September 24 to November 30 was the perfect time to visit Yorke Peninsula.

"The landscapes come alive with colour in spring, and the weather is warming up," she said.

"Point Turton has been lucky not to have seen any signs of the algae bloom. The fishing has been really good, and our morning swimmers are still at it every day.

"When parks are empty, every business in our community is affected — we need your support."

South Australians successful in the voucher ballot will be notified via SMS and email, and provided with a unique code to spend on participating offers in their voucher's denomination.

Bookings must be made between September 23 and October 24.

For more information, visit southaustralia.com/voucher.

State algae inquiry

SUBMISSIONS are now open for the state parliament's inquiry into the algal bloom.

The inquiry will consider factors contributing to the bloom's occurrence and rapid spread; its economic, health and wellbeing impacts; the state government's response; and long-term monitoring and prevention strategies.

Greens MLC Robert Simms has been elected chair of the inquiry.

Submissions can be emailed to JCHAB@parliament.sa.gov.au by October 10.

A federal inquiry is also underway, with a public hearing held at Ardrossan on September 11 after submissions closed on August 22.

Algae grant numbers

TWELVE Yorke Peninsula businesses have received an algal bloom grant from the state government as at September 15, according to a government spokesperson.

This number is across both the fisheries and aquaculture, and small business streams.

A further six applications from YP businesses were under active assessment, and others were progressing to the assessment process, the spokesperson said.

Climate action

MARINE heatwaves for half the year and climate-driven disasters costing seven times more could be Australia's reality in 2100, according to the federal government's national climate risk assessment.

The report, released last week, shows the world is estimated to heat up by 2.7 degrees Celsius in the next 65 years, based on current policies to cut climate pollution.

Predictions include spending four times longer in heatwaves, five times more deaths from extreme heat, and 18 times more coastal flooding.

The news comes as the federal government has set a 2035 climate pollution target of 62 to 70 per cent reduction on 2005 levels.

According to the Climate Council, four independent analyses show a 75 per cent reduction is possible.

Australia had already committed to reducing climate pollution to net zero by 2050 and is targeting a 43 per cent reduction by 2030.

Edithburgh Jetty recovery

DIVER Troy Johnson has noted signs of recovery at the Edithburgh Jetty, a previously prosperous site of marine life since hit by the algal

Mr Johnson dived under the jetty on August 29 and September 12 and posted photos of the re-emerging life on the Friends of Edithburgh Jetty Facebook group.

"It's gone from pretty much no life there to all those photos of the various species that we did see," he said.

There were a lot of crabs, quite a few of the more resilient fish species, and some of the species that were the first to wash up on the beaches as well."

The diver's posts garnered a total 4700 reactions.

"The reason I put that out is to try to get a little bit of positivity back, given it's been a barrage of negative stuff," he said.

"The dive there at Edithburgh is still quite good.

"There's still some pretty grave concerns, but at least we're starting to see something."

Mr Johnson said he also dived under the jetty back when the bloom was present in Edithburgh.

"I was here when the bushfire come through, and it was just like that.

"You see after the bushfire goes through, everything's black and charred, there's no life and a smoky haze left," he said.

"It was horrific."

Parliament of South Australia

JOINT COMMITTEE ON HARMFUL ALGAL BLOOMS IN SOUTH AUSTRALIA

A Joint Committee has been appointed to inquire into and report on the harmful algal blooms in South Australian marine and coastal environments, with particular reference to:

- (a) Contributing environmental, land management or water quality factors;
- (b) Ecological, economic, cultural and social impacts of algal blooms including impact on community health and wellbeing;
- (c) The cultural and economic impacts on Indigenous communities, including any loss of access to cultural practices;
- (d) The coordination of state government responses, including agency responsibility, industry engagement, scientific advice, and public communications:
- (e) The current support and recovery arrangements for impacted industries and communities;
- The adequacy of long-term monitoring, forecasting and prevention strategies;
- (g) The adequacy of research funding, rehabilitation and recovery planning;
- (h) Any other related matters.

Any person or organisation wishing to make a written submission to the Committee, or register an interest in presenting oral evidence to the Committee, is invited to do so by Friday, 10 October 2025.

Written submissions and expressions of interest should be addressed to the Secretary to the Committee c/- Parliament House, GPO Box 572, Adelaide 5001, by telephone on (08) 8237 9498, or e-mail at JCHAB@parliament.sa.gov.au .

Community 'hungry for knowledge'

Sarah Herrmann JOURNALIST

SOUTHERN Yorke Peninsula residents turned citizen scientists are learning to study water samples under a microscope to help fill gaps in algae monitoring records.

Funded by Yorke Peninsula Council, ecologist Faith Coleman has so far introduced 18 SYP residents to the task and will mentor them over the next six months, with the hope they will train others in the future.

- Faith Coleman, ecologist

"I find it really liberating for community members to be able to look their enemy in the eye, so to speak, and be able to identify it and do that work themselves, because we've handed way too much of that over to government agencies," Ms Coleman said.

"I'm teaching them how to take a sample, condense it if need be with a preservative, put it under the microscope, just literally sit there counting 'this number of organism A, this number of organism B', take a photograph of both of those, put it up on iNaturalist and write down the count underneath.

"iNaturalist does an initial ID for you ... and then experts from all around the place can also ID it, and it means PIRSA has constant access to photos that people are taking.

"It's hugely challenging to ID, so that's why we've set up this system through iNaturalist to do that part, but getting people on the ground is really important."

YPC environmental officer Letitia Dahl-helm said council recognised the opportunity to engage the community in a hands-on project.

"With this unprecedented event, there was a real desire for action to be taken because there was a delay in having access to the state government monitoring," she said.

"And they have now announced an expanded program, but there's still gaps in that because the state's huge and especially our coastline.

"(The citizen science) is not only to monitor the current bloom but to flag future blooms and then notify the relevant authorities.

'There's also the wellbeing aspect that you're actually doing something for something that's so overwhelming, especially for the oyster farmers who are experiencing a real impact on their business."

Stansbury oyster grower Paul Dee is one of the participants in what he called a "crash course" in microscopy.

"I see the need for ongoing community science workshops and the need for YPC to receive some funding to support these programs," he said.

"The community are hungry for knowledge."

Ms Dahl-helm said YPC was looking at funding opportunities to purchase more microscopes, in addition to the one stationed in council's Minlaton office.

She said once the trainees had practice and confidence, council would do a call-out to the broader community to get involved by bringing samples to those trainees.

To express interest in the project, email admin@yorke.sa.gov.au.

The Phytoplankton of South Australia Facebook page is also a space for citizen science discussion.

The state government's water testing results are available at algalbloom.sa.gov.au/where-thealgal-bloom-is.

More citizen science

THE Edithburgh and Wool Bay Jetties Marine Watch is another grassroots citizen science initiative dedicated to monitoring the algal bloom.

Led by divers Paul MacDonald and Elizabeth Solich, the project officially began its monitoring last week (Friday, September 19) via underwater photographic surveys.

With tags marking specific sections of the jetties, repeat photographs over time will reveal changes in marine growth, habitat use and structural health, according to the project's Facebook page.

This data will also be uploaded to iNaturalist.

Summer swimming questions answered

Sarah Herrmann JOURNALIST

OCEAN swimming lessons are likely to go ahead this summer, according to the recreation minister.

Minister Emily Bourke, formerly of Pine Point, was asked about the matter during the panel Q&A section of a state government algal bloom forum in Ardrossan earlier this month.

Ms Bourke said the government had held a roundtable the day before the forum (September 10 and 11 respectively).

"We had lots of people in the room because winter sports have started to finish and people are starting to think about what does summer look like for our sport," she said.

"We want people to keep fit and healthy, we also want them to do it with confidence.

"Surf Life Saving have been thinking about this since March because we've had them come in as government and be at the table because we know they're there to protect and keep our communities safe.

"Is it safe to swim, would they put their flags out and say this is where you should swim? The answer was

"They provide risk assessments and they feel it is safe to swim if it's not foamy, if it's clear — that is what they will be doing."

The forum attendee who raised the topic said she was a teacher and her daughter was a swimming instructor, and that she was concerned about keeping students and instructors safe.

"With VACSWIM, not every day is necessarily in the water, so if it's a really bad day for water quality, it might be the day that they spend going through rules and understandings on the beach and not getting in the water," Ms Bourke said.

"Surf Lifesaving have also developed a Beachsafe app, which has all beaches listed on it, and they're finding ways to train up people around the state from the sporting community so they can say 'this particular person can go and nominate that the risk assessment has been done todav and it's low levels, it's clear to swim'. "We want to be able to have that information as soon as possible."

SA Health's Chris Lease also said contingency planning was underway for situations such as if lessons needed to be relocated due to poor water quality.

The state government's "summer plan" regarding the algal bloom is expected to be released in October.

Molly survives mauling

Plea for owners to have control of their dogs

Michelle Daw JOURNALIST

BRAVE Molly the MindDog is getting ready to ride again after being mauled by two large dogs during a tricycle ride with her owner, Jane Gersch of Kadina.

Molly endured hours of surgery and received 40 stitches in various parts of her body, including around her neck, where a wound came dangerously close to an artery. The muscles in her front leg were also torn from her chest.

Jane, who has an acquired brain injury from a horse-riding accident, got Molly two and a half years ago as an accredited MindDog, trained to accompany her owner in all public places.

Jane said Molly was lucky to survive her traumatic ordeal and urged dog owners to ensure they can control their pets in public.

"I would like to encourage people to walk only one dog at a time and ensure that all harnesses and muzzles are well secured and that you can hold and restrain the dog," she said.

"If you're going to have dogs, you have got to control them."

The attack

Jane and Molly were riding on the Copper Coast Rail Trail on Saturday, August 30, between the six and seven-kilometre markers from Kadina towards Wallaroo, when they encountered a man walking two large dogs on leads and harnesses.

As Jane passed from behind, the dogs lunged, pulling the man to the ground.

"I was about to stop to help the man, but decided against it when I saw the dogs, so I kept riding," she said.

"We were less than 40 metres ahead, and the black dog caught up with us."

Molly was secured in her basket with three ties, but the black dog dragged her out, snapping two of the metal clips, tipping the bike over, and began shaking her, although she was still on her lead.

"By this time, the man had caught up and was trying to get the black dog to release its hold," Jane said.

The white dog was closer to me, but she had no collar or lead on and had lost her muzzle, so I grabbed her by the back leg to stop her from catching up with the black dog and Molly.

"Then Molly came back to me; however, the white dog grabbed her and shook her.

"Because I have balance issues, all I could do was encourage the white dog to drop her."

Surgery and recovery

Once Molly was free, the man offered to cover veterinary costs, but in the panic and because Molly did not seem to be bleeding much, Jane did not accept.

As soon as she could, Jane took Molly to a local vet, where staff initially told her to return later, but once Molly was shaved the extent of her injuries became clear.

She underwent surgery and was not released for nine hours; the bill came to "Molly is getting a little bit better every day and is running around, but I think she is going to have a limp and will struggle in five years' time," Jane said.

Daily exercise with Molly is a key part of managing Jane's brain injury and ongoing health issues.

She is determined to ride again — this time with a custom-made, metal-framed lid to protect Molly's basket.

Rights and rules after dog attacks

PEOPLE have the right to defend themselves and their animals against a dog attack and force can be used, Copper Coast Council has advised.

A council spokesperson said people could call SA Police or the council in the event of the attack, and later complete a dog attack report, available on council's website or at its Kadina office.

Council has powers under the Dog and Cat Management Act to control dogs that pose a danger to other animals or people.

This can include Destruction or Control Orders, which may see a dog seized or euthanised, or conditions imposed on how it is kept and handled, such as requiring a muzzle.

"All dogs are required to be on a leash shorter than two metres within the Copper Coast area, except designated dog parks and on the beaches," the spokesperson said.

"The council does prefer that dogs are kept on leash, even at the beach. Where a dog is allowed to be off leash, the dog must be under effective control this means the dog must be able to be recalled on the first attempt, and must not attack, chase or harass other people or owned animals."

The spokesperson said a review of dog attack statistics earlier this year showed the apparent increase in incidents was largely due to mandatory reporting by doctors and higher community awareness following the Good Dogs Have Bad Days campaign by the Dog and Cat Management Board.

While the number of orders issued by Copper Coast Council had increased, the number of dogs formally designated as dangerous had decreased.

Fake notes circulating

POLICE are warning business owners to watch out for counterfeit cash after several incidents across the Yorke Mid North area.

Fake $100 and $50 notes were used at service stations, hotels and supermarkets between August 21 and September 12.

Officers urged business owners and retail staff to check money carefully and recommended that customers confirm their notes when paying or receiving

"If you suspect you have a counterfeit note, please report it to the Police Assistance Line on 131 444," a SAPOL spokesperson said.

Police advised people to handle the note as little as possible, store it in an envelope, and be ready to give details about when and where the note was received, and a description of the person who handed it over.

For business owners, police recommended noting key details if a suspect customer left before officers arrived, including the person's appearance, any companions, and their vehicle. Checking CCTV footage could also help.

"It is best to compare a suspect note with one that is known to be genuine," the spokes-

Road ratings withheld

Sarah Herrmann
JOURNALIST

SAFETY ratings for South Australia's major roads are being withheld from release, according to Narungga MP Fraser Ellis, but the SA Government says it is waiting for the results to be verified.

I'm not sure what they think they're achieving by withholding this information, and it'll be more help than anything to a lot of people, including themselves.

Fraser Ellis,
 Narungga MP

Austroads — a not-forprofit, nonpartisan organisation funded by government transport agencies — has publicly released its latest ratings for all states and territories, except Queensland, Tasmania and South Australia.

Mr Ellis said QLD and TAS's results were not yet ready, but that the SA Government had withheld consent to have theirs published by Austroads.

"I think that data would be tremendously helpful in advocating for improvements to the roads that are assigned a low star rating and, where appropriate, advocating for increased speed limits on roads that are deemed safe," he said.

"There's no secret in the fact that our road network is substandard, so if they (the SA Government) think that concealing this information will somehow help them escape that reality, they are mistaken.

"I'm not sure what they think they're achieving by withholding this information, and it'll be more help than anything to a lot of people, including themselves.

"It helps objectify the way in which they apportion road funding."

The ratings are part of the Australian Road Assessment Program, a nationally coordinated effort to identify which roads pose the highest risks of death and serious injury, Austroads chief executive Geoff Allan said.

Roads are rated from onestar (least safe) to five-star (safest), and the results are presented on the interactive National AusRAP Dashboard.

"Road safety star ratings are a robust and trusted tool for communicating road safety information to the public," Mr Allan said.

"By publishing star ratings and crash history data on a single, national dashboard, we're giving governments and the community a clear line of sight to where upgrades will have the greatest impact."

RAA safety and infrastructure senior manager Charles Mountain said RAA was disappointed South Australia's data had not been made publicly available.

"RAA would like to see as many of our major roads as possible upgraded to a minimum of three stars, so we look forward to analysing the data and seeing where investment needs to be prioritised," he said.

A Department of Infrastructure and Transport spokesperson said DIT would support the SA road ratings' publication once data collected had been verified, which they said was in line with QLD

"The decision to publish South Australian AusRAP star ratings will be reserved until the department has confidence in the accuracy of the data, and we are actively working to complete these assessments," they said.

Log on for a safer day on the water

Michelle Daw JOURNALIST

BOATIES are being reminded to log on with their local Volunteer Marine Rescue service before heading out this summer, to help ensure a safer experience on the water.

Colin Mason, of the Royal Volunteer Coastal Patrol, said logging on meant the VMR team was aware of a vessel's planned movements in case assistance was needed, saving valuable time in an emergency.

"You'll also get radio checks and have access to weather and hazard warnings," Mr Mason said.

Logging on can be done by marine radio; radio operators ask for basic information, including boat registration number, place of departure, destination, planned time of return, the number of people on board, and mobile phone numbers.

The RVCP responds to calls for the southern waters of Spencer Gulf with Mr Mason operating the Yorketown radio base.

The RVCP also has a base at Port Victoria, operates three mobile radio units, and has two marine rescue vessels based at Port Victoria and another at Point Turton.

The service works in close cooperation with the SA Police Water Operations Unit and other Volunteer Marine Rescue groups in the region.

In line with other VMR services, the RVCP monitors VHF marine channel 16.

Mr Mason, a radio operator with 39 years of experience, said a VHF marine radio was an essential piece of safety equipment for all vessels.

"It enables direct contact with marine rescue agencies and nearby boats should assistance be needed after an accident or breakdown," he said.

Mr Mason urged boaties to log on with their local VMR service before heading out and to log off when they re-

"That applies whether you're out for a morning's fishing, a day trip around your local area or cruising along the coastline," he said.

"And it doesn't matter if you're on a tinnie, a cruiser, a yacht, a kayak, a canoe or a jet ski."

If plans change during a trip, Mr Mason said it is simple to update details.

"If the fish are biting and you decide to stay out longer, just call the base on VHF channel 16 and update your arrival time," he said.

"We'll stand watch. If you don't log off as planned, we'll try calling you first — just in case you've forgotten and already headed home with your catch.

"If there's no response, we'll step up our response and our volunteers will begin a

Mr Mason said, while mobile phones were useful at sea, they should never be relied on as the sole means of emergency communication.

"Don't bet your life — or the safety of your boat and crew — on a mobile phone as your first or only way to call for help," he said.

"When you make a phone call, you're only talking to one person, and how often do mobile phone calls drop out mid-conversation?

"Most mobiles don't work well when wet or damp, and there are no mobile towers

"When you call for help on your marine radio, other vessels can hear the call, and there may be another boat nearby that can assist much

TWO long-standing Royal Volunteer Coastal Patrol members on Yorke Peninsula have been awarded life membership in recognition of decades of dedicated service.

Mr Johnson, the current Commanding Officer of the RVCP Port Victoria Division, has served the organisation for 39 years and held numerous leadership roles.

He has also represented the division on local and state Volunteer Marine Rescue boards and committees.

"Graham has been involved in the running and administration of the Port Victoria Coastal Patrol since its early inception in 1985," his citation read.

"From its inception until now. Graham has been involved in the establishment and continual improvement of the organisation. He has acted with integrity and treated everyone with respect and dignity."

He served as a rescue vessel owner/operator at the Point Souttar base and was the divisional commander until his recent retirement.

"His service and commitment to the organisation have been outstanding and cannot be faulted," his citation read.

Canola crops 'out of bounds'

SIGHTSEERS are being urged to stay off private land and out of canola crops when taking photos, after reports of people climbing fences into flowering paddocks in the Barossa Valley and near Gawler earlier this month.

While drought has reduced the area planted to canola across South Australia this year, many crops are now flowering in their familiar bright yellow, creating a popular backdrop for social media posts.

Grain Producers SA is reminding the public that these paddocks are working farms, not tourist attractions, and that trespassing can create serious biosecurity risks for growers.

GPSA chief executive Brad Perry said the issue arises every year and this reminder is timely to protect crops, reduce risks and keep people safe.

"Photos in front of the fence with the canola crop behind are okay, but photos in the crop are not," Mr Perry said.

"Canola crops are private property and represent an important part of a grower's live-

"Jumping the fence for a photo might seem harmless, but it can cause crop damage and create biosecurity risks by spreading pests, diseases or weed seeds between paddocks.

"It can also put people in harm's way around heavy machinery or on uneven ground.

"Farmers are already under significant pressure this season with low rainfall and tight margins, and the last thing they need is preventable damage or extra risk caused by people entering their paddocks."

Mr Perry said GPSA encouraged visitors to enjoy the spectacular yellow displays from safe vantage points, such as the roadside or designated viewing areas.

"It's about respecting the people who grow our food and fibre while keeping everyone safe," he said.

Blue Donut Week — a sweet way to support police families

SOUTH Australians are asked to buy a Blue Donut this week to raise funds for SA Police Legacy, the charity that supports police families during times of illness, injury or bereavement.

Blue Donut Week runs from September 22 to 29, with proceeds going directly to the organisation in the lead-up to National Police Remembrance Day on September

"When the worst happens, SA Police Legacy steps in to ensure no police family is left behind," SA Police Legacy board chair Chief Inspector Kellie Watkins said.

Something as simple as buying a Blue Donut can make a real difference to children who have lost a parent, or to families who need ongoing support."

For Brevet Sergeant Nick Fatchen, the fundraiser is personal.

His wife Emma was diagnosed with pancreatic cancer in 2013 and died the following year, aged just 37. The couple had two young children, Izaac and Sophie, and Emma's eldest son, Shaun.

"SA Police Legacy reached out very early on when Emma was sick," Nick said.

The charity paid for a family weekend in the Barossa before Emma passed and has provided support ever since.

At the time, the charity's assistance lasted three years for families of serving officers. But when that support ended, Nick received unexpected news.

"And then I get out of the blue this email saying, 'we've changed our policies, and you're eligible again for all these things'. And there was just this weight that lifted off me," he said.

Over the years, SA Police Legacy has covered school fees, uniforms, camps, laptops, phones, driving lessons and family outings for Izaac and Sophie.

"SA Police Legacy have provided free family tickets to the show ... those silly family things together ... build memories," Nick said.

Izaac, now 20, is set to graduate from the South Australian Police Academy in October. He donates from his pay to SA Police Legacy.

"I know from experience how much of a difference SA Police Legacy can make," he said.

Drakes Supermarkets are again backing Blue Donut Week with Blue Donuts supplied by Vili's Bakery, alongside bakeries across South Australia, including Toogood Bakery in Moonta.

Burners Beach campground renewed

BURNERS Beach bush campground has reopened in time for the October long weekend and school holidays. Yorke Peninsula Council closed the site temporarily after midyear storms caused damage.

Council staff have since completed repairs and tidied the area to ensure it is safe for public use, Acting Mayor Richard Carruthers said.

"Camping is one of the best ways to experience our region," Mr Carruthers said.

"Our crews did an outstanding job repairing access and getting Burners Beach ready for locals and visitors to enjoy again."

While the western campground is reopened, the smaller eastern section remains closed due to more substantial storm damage.

YPC manages 19 campgrounds, mostly along the southern and western coasts.

These remain largely unaffected by algal blooms reported in other areas.

Bush camping is half-price ($10 per night) until the end of September.

Mr Carruthers said the temporary discount was one of several measures YPC had introduced to encourage visitation and support the local economy and communities affected by the blooms.

'This initiative aims to bring more visitors to Yorke Peninsula, offer affordable holiday options for families, and give locals a great opportunity to enjoy a holiday close to home," he said.

"By supporting bush camping, we're also supporting local businesses and helping to strengthen the regional economy through increased tourism."

Full price permits are $20 per night, with discounts for longer stays. Annual permits are available to locals for $400 (expiry June 30). Bookings can be made at www.vorke.sa.gov.au.

Council is continuing repair work across the region following the severe weather experienced midyear.

State's holiday homes in limbo

Sarah Herrmann JOURNALIST

SHORT-stay accommodation in South Australia could soon be subject to new regulations, raising concerns among Yorke Peninsula stakeholders about potential impacts on the region's visitor economy.

A state parliamentary inquiry has linked the sector to the rental affordability crisis and recommended a registration scheme to evaluate its impact.

The inquiry also proposed the state government charge a registration fee or levy, and suggested tax incentives or one-off grants to encourage owners to transition vacant properties into long-term rental properties.

However, recent University of South Australia research found strict regulation of short-term rentals may not improve housing supply or affordability — and could actually hurt tourism.

Maitland-based Country Getaways Holiday Rentals, which manages around 200 self-contained properties, shared these concerns in its submission to the inquiry.

"The majority of short-term rental property owners in Yorke Peninsula choose to retain their properties for personal use during parts of the year," the submission read.

"They have little to no interest in offering them as long-term rentals.

"Even if regulatory pressures were introduced, many properties would simply be taken off the rental market altogether rather than converted to permanent rentals.

"Restricting short-term rentals on Yorke Peninsula would not resolve the (housing affordability) crisis and may in fact harm the broader regional economy."

Narungga MP Fraser Ellis said he suspected short-term accommodation did affect private rental availability, but warned against disincentives.

'Rather than imposing a registration scheme, the associated cost and the bureaucracy, I believe that decision makers should have investigated why property owners prefer the short-term accommodation market,"

Then policy should address that by incentivising private rental in relation to those preferences.

"A tax break or discount that encourages more stock onto the private rental market would be far better than punishing those who choose to place their property on the shortterm accommodation market."

Yorke Peninsula Tourism's submission to the inquiry raised additional challenges for regional accommodation supply.

"High building costs and the difficulty in aligning the return a developer needs and the lease an operator can pay to run a viable business make new motel developments in regional locations almost impossible at the moment," the submission read.

HCC celebrates renovated learning space

Austinn Lane JOURNALIST

HARVEST Christian College, Kadina, officially opened its renovated library on Friday, September 19, providing students with an updated and flexible learning space.

After the formal proceedings, guests gathered in the library to share food, coffee and conversation about the new facilities and their role in the college's learning environment.

HCC marketing and communications officer Lauren Evans said the renovation highlighted the college's ongoing focus on student development.

"It reflects our commitment to providing every student, from Foundation to Year 12, with resources and spaces that inspire a love of learning," Ms Evans said.

"A strong commitment to literacy is at the heart of this vision, making sure all students have the best opportunity to grow in reading and writing?

Ms Evans noted that the new library would offer additional support for student development.

"The new library will build on the rich learning opportunities already available at Harvest Christian College, enhancing access to resources and providing flexible spaces," she said.

"We believe learning environments should be dynamic, inclusive and engaging.

"The library embodies this vision by offering spaces where students can collaborate or work independently."

The renovated building retains its original name, the Weightman Building, in recognition of Kylie Weightman's foundational role in establishing the college library.

The building was first opened in 2007, seven years after the college was established.

Attendees included Senator Karen Grogan, Narungga MP Fraser Ellis, Copper Coast Council deputy mayor Neil Sawley, Australian Independent Schools of South Australia (AISSA) chief executive and South Australia Independent Schools Block Grant Authority (SAISBGA) public officer Anne Dunstan, SAISBGA executive officer Jane Pike, SAISBGA finance officer Jeanette Kociolek and Tyndale Group of Christian Schools (TGCS) chief executive Mike Potter, along with staff, students, community members and others who contributed to the project.

Door open for veteran support

ABOUT 20 local defence veterans and supporters attended the official opening of the Military Advocates of South Australia Wallaroo office on September 12.

Veteran services officer Stephen Beal, from the Veterans Wellbeing Centre at Daw Park, highlighted the work of MASA wellbeing and compensation advocates and acknowledged funding support from the Department of Veterans' Affairs.

He also stressed the value of regional offices, which allow veterans to access DVA online services and speak with a wellbeing officer in a private, confidential space.

The Wallaroo office is co-located with the Wallaroo RSL and can be accessed by a separate, discrete side entrance.

MASA's Wallaroo wellbeing officer Dave Jackson already supports more than 30 clients across the region, from Port Broughton to Stansbury.

He assists with DVA entitlements, as well as needs such as health care, aged care, housing and community services like Meals on Wheels.

"I have been able to support veterans to gain official recognition for their military service, creating a pathway to ensure they get the appropriate support they need to manage their health and wellbeing," Mr Jackson said.

"The launch and lunch to follow provided the opportunity for veterans to mix with others who have served and understand the impact their service has on their current lifestyle.

"Friendships were rekindled and some former workmates caught up after more than 25 years, consolidating their service history and commitment to the Australian Defence Force."

A Copper Coast Council representative and a community care provider also attended the opening.

Appointments can be arranged at the MASA office or in clients' homes. To book, call Dave Jackson on 0437 752 751.

Explore, create and connect at Minlagawi Nature Festival will return on Thursday, October 2, offering a range of free activities aimed at connecting the community with the natural environment.

To be held at Minlagawi Gum Flat Reserve in Minlaton, the event is supported by the Nharangga Aboriginal Progress Association and Yorke Peninsula Council.

More than 200 people attended last year's festival, and organisers hope to see strong community participation again this year.

Families can expect a variety of nature-based activities, including Nharangga face painting and craft, cubby building, earth drums, fairy gardens, nature crowns, rock art and other creative experiences inspired by the natural world.

YPC environment officer Letitia Dahl-Helm said the festival was designed to engage people of all ages and abilities.

"The Minlagawi Nature Festival is a celebration of our environment and culture," Ms Dahl-Helm said.

"From babies and toddlers to MINLAGAWI Nature Festival teens, there are activities to spark curiosity, encourage creativity, and foster a love of nature."

> She said the event also encourages community connection.

"It's such a beautiful opportunity to slow down, spend time together outdoors and celebrate Nharangga culture alongside nature-based play," she said.

"Last year more than 200 people joined us, and we can't wait to welcome even more this year."

Attendees are encouraged to bring a picnic basket, snacks and a rug to enjoy morning tea or lunch in the reserve during the spring school holidays.

Activities begin at 10am and finish at 1pm.

Goat success a team effort for NYP students at Royal Adelaide Show

SHOW TEAM... The Port Broughton Area School led-goat team at the Royal Adelaide Show, staff members Andrew Smith, Kristy Patterson, and Jodie Mackrill (right), with students Emma, Jazz, Josh, Ella, Alex, Indi, Madison, Tahlia, Jazzy and Zahra.

PORT Broughton Area School's agriculture team returned from the 2025 Royal Adelaide Show's led-goat schools competition with 11 ribbons.

The event, which featured 268 goats, is the largest of its kind in Australia, PBAS principal Scott Moore said.

In addition to the individual class ribbons won by 12 goats, the PBAS team was awarded third place in the Most Professional Team category.

Team leader Tahlia was also recognised for her outstanding leadership throughout the competition.

Mr Moore praised the team's efforts.

"This result reflects months of hard work, early mornings and the dedication of our students," he said.

"The standard at the Royal Show is incredibly high, so for a small rural school to place so strongly is something we're very proud of."

In the Lightweight category, Cinnamon (led by Tahlia) and Nutmeg (led by Indi) each won first place, while Chai (Ella T) came second, and Sumac-Mint (Jazzy A) secured third.

Other place-getters included All Spice, Pepper, and Paprika.

In the Heavyweight category, Alfalfa (Tahlia) came second, with Basil, Curry, and Onion all placing within the top five of their classes.

Several goats advanced to the champion finals, including Cinnamon and Tahlia in the Lightweight Grand Champion final, and Nutmeg (Indi), Alfalfa (Tahlia), and Chai (Ella T) in the Heavyweight Champion final.

"Our students demonstrated professionalism, teamwork, and genuine passion for agriculture.

"They represented our school with pride," he said.

Support from the Port Broughton community — including local farmers and businesses — was instrumental to the program's success.

"Their donations of feed, equipment, stock and transport make this program possible," Mr Moore said.

"It's a true community effort, and the results speak for themselves."

He also commended staff members Kristy Patterson, Andrew Smith and Jodie MacKrill for their commitment and expertise in preparing students and animals for competition.

"This event is a perfect example of what a strong agricultural education program looks like when schools, communities, and students all work together," Mr Moore said.

SENIOR students from across Yorke Peninsula are gaining practical industry skills through the Certificate II in Resources and Infrastructure, now being delivered at Ardrossan Area School.

The course is run in partnership with TAFE SA and includes participants from Ardrossan Area School, Moonta Area School, Kadina Memorial School and Minlaton District School.

Students receive hands-on training in highdemand areas such as working at heights, confined spaces, plant isolation, environmental and heritage assessment, and workplace communication.

Supported by Rex Minerals, which has supplied personal protective equipment and assisted with course delivery, the program is a collaboration between schools, industry and TAFE aimed at preparing students for careers in the resources and infrastructure sectors.

"The course has taught us how to conduct local risk assessments and how to use a gas monitor and do a bump test," participant Tom said. "John has made the whole process fun and exciting as we all work as a team." Fellow student Bodie said they had also learnt how to communicate effectively using two-way radios, whistles and hand signals. "We learnt how to check our equipment for failure and set up a static line," he said.

Central Yorke School connects community on R U OK? Day

CENTRAL Yorke School marked R U OK? Day with school and community activities at its Maitland campus on Thursday, September 11.

There was a whole-school breakfast shared by staff and students, and a range of activities focused on mental health awareness.

The event aimed to support conversations about mental wellbeing and encourage regular check-ins among students and staff.

Visitors from the SA Ambulance Service attended, giving students an opportunity to view ambulance vehicles and ask questions about medical equipment and services.

Activities included face painting, a photo booth and a classroom door decoration competition aligned with the R U OK? Day theme.

Three classes were recognised in the competition: the Primary Learning Hub, the Year 4/5 class and the Year 9/10 class.

The school acknowledged the support of the wellbeing team and the SA Ambulance Service volunteers in coordinating and delivering the

Minlaton school recognised with leadership award

MINLATON District School was recognised on Thursday evening with a prestigious state award, celebrating the strength of its leadership and community focus.

The school received the South Australian Area School Leaders Association Best Practice Award, presented on Thursday, September 18.

The awards recognise schools that lead the way in learning, support and community engagement.

"Behind the scenes, staff are continually working to improve outcomes — aligning with the school's strategic learning direction, engaging in professional development, and enhancing classroom practices," principal Andrew Dickinson

"Their dedication to growth and innovation is central to the school's continued success.

"This award is external validation, but the real reward is the impact we are having on students and our community.

"At our school, we are proud of our passionate staff, engaged students, and supportive families who together make our school such a vibrant and successful learning community."

Ardrossan Area School and Yorketown Area School also received special mentions on the night, recognised for their ongoing commitment to leadership and learning excellence.

Time capsule to be opened at Kulpara Primary School

A TIME capsule buried at the former Kulpara Primary School will be opened on Sunday, October 5, 25 years after the school's final cohort of students sealed it.

The capsule, which contains letters, photographs and mementos from the school's last students, was laid during a back-to-school celebration in October 2000, following the school's closure on December

"The upcoming event is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to celebrate the school's proud history and enduring community spirit.

- Graham Pridham, KPS old scholar

The event marks a significant milestone for the Kulpara community and offers a unique opportunity to reconnect with the past, KPS old scholar Graham Pridham said.

"All former students, staff, families and community members are invited to attend the celebration, which will begin at 1pm at the Kulpara Primary School grounds," Mr Pridham said.

"The afternoon will feature the official opening of the time capsule, a display of its contents, and a light afternoon tea.

"It will also be a chance for attendees to catch up with old friends and reminisce about their time at the school, while enjoying the recently completed stage one of the school grounds redevelopment."

KPS was established in 1877 on land partly donated by local farmers, to serve the needs of a growing rural community.

It provided 123 years of learning before closing its doors in December 1999, having educated generations of local families.

"The upcoming event is a oncein-a-lifetime opportunity to celebrate the school's proud history and enduring community spirit," Mr Pridham said.

"Guests are welcome to bring along any memorabilia or photographs they would like to share on the day."

For more information, see this week's YP Country Times Community Calendar listing, or contact David Koch on 0428 273 205 or Graham Pridham, 0408 273 203.

Celebrating 150 years of Coobowie history

A DEDICATED group of volunteers has produced a book capturing Coobowie's 150-year history.

A year in the making, the 56-page book is the result of extensive research, community conversations and contributions.

It will be available for sale during Coobowie's 150th celebrations on Saturday and Sunday, October 11-12.

Creating the book offered the community a unique opportunity to reflect on Coobowie's past, acknowledge its First Nations people, honour the pioneers and look to the town's future.

The book features historical photographs and stories contributed by community members, including Marie and Malcolm Stanton, and Neil Hancock, who shared tales of the Coobowie Sports Days.

The book is designed as a keepsake to be passed down through future generations.

The Coobowie area was surveyed in 1838 and named Salt Creek in 1848. It was the earliest identifiable port on the southern Yorke Peninsula.

From 1848 to 1940, Coobowie - named by the local Nharangga people — thrived as a port exporting grain, wool, lime, salt and timber.

Over the past 150 years, many local businesses, churches, lime kilns and the salt refinery have dis-

However, the Coobowie Hotel, built around 1875, still stands and operates today.

Special thanks go to Rob Wiseman for designing the book, and to Marie and Malcolm Stanton, John Coker and Kathy Tape for gathering and collating historical content.

Thanks also to Michael Hoile at the Pioneer Printing Office in Yorketown for his support.

Although not all contributions could be included in the book, the remaining materials will be archived at the Edithburgh Museum for public access.

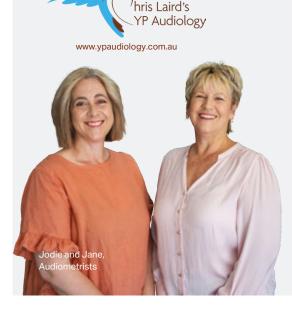

The history book will be available for purchase at the Coobowie Community Hall during the celebrations on October 11 and 12.

Wombat social club donation supports local line dancers

ECLIPSE Line Dancers have added $790 to their fundraising total thanks to a generous donation from the Wombat Social Club, presented at the club's meeting in Kadina on Sunday,

The funds were raised through the sale of Friday night meat tray raffle tickets during July, with Ken Rudd selling tickets on behalf of the dancers throughout the month.

The donation brings Eclipse Line Dancers' current annual fundraising total to $5629, with efforts continuing until August 2026. This year's funds will support The Heart Foundation.

Group member Crystel Rudd expressed her appreciation for the Wombat Social Club's ongoing support, which has helped the dancers raise money for several causes over the years. These include Relay for Life (Cancer Council SA), Stamp Out Suicide Yorke Peninsula, motor neurone disease, and childhood dementia.

The partnership between the club and Eclipse Line Dancers continues to make a positive impact across the Yorke Peninsula community, Crystel said.

FUNDRAISER... Eclipse Line Dancers members Heather Simpson and Crystel Rudd accept a fundraising donation from Wombat Social Club president Tony Harrison.

SYP Photography Club shines in state competition

SOUTHERN Yorke Peninsula Photography Club has achieved major success at the 62nd South Australian Photographic Federation Annual Exhibition, taking home multiple honours, including a top-three placing in the Club Sets Category 1 and the highest individual award of the event.

Exhibition winners were announced at a special function at the Glenelg Golf Club on August

With 1141 entries from 71 individual photographers and 14 clubs across SA, and an acceptance rate of just 30 per cent, the club's achievements stand out as a significant accomplishment, SYPCC chair Adam Meyer said.

Leading the way was Denise Jackson-Cook, who won the Barbara Mullins Digital Image of the Year for her striking image "Dunes at Sunset", which also secured first place in the Digital -Open Colour category.

Ms Jackson-Cook also received acceptances for her works "Flower of Blood" and "Double the Caper".

Other club members to be recognised for their work include Mr Meyer, who earned a merit award for "Pillars" in the Digital Landscape/Seascape category, and an acceptance for "Tracking Colour" in Digital — Open Colour.

His image "Pondalowie Energy" was also accepted in the Special Section: National and Conservation Parks in SA.

Tim Cook received a merit award for "Snake Lines in the Sand" in Digital — Landscape/Seascape, and Elizabeth Daniels gained an acceptance for "Just Walk On By' in the Digital — Photojournalism/ Street Photography category.

'This was an excellent achievement for our rural club that has been around less than five years," Mr Meyer said.

"A special congratulations to Denise Jackson-Cook who not only won the Digital Open Colour category but also the overall best Digital Image of the Year."

Following on from its success at the SAPF exhibition, the club will host its first public exhibition over the October long weekend at Ballara Art and Lifestyle Retreat,

The exhibition will be open 10am and 3pm daily, October 4 to 6, showcasing members' photographic talents and providing the public with an opportunity to view award-winning local imagery.

STATE WINNER... Denise Jackson-Cook's "Dunes at Sunset" won the overall best digital image at the statewide SAPF Annual Exhibition.

SEASCAPE... Adam Meyer's "Pillars" earned a merit award.

Celebrating service: Leonie awarded life membership

HIGH HONOUR... Wallaroo Probus Club president Geoff Male presents life membership to Leonie Jauczius at a recent club meeting.

Story Dogs delight at Moonta Probus meeting

AFTER a brief absence, Wendy and Greg Gerblich were warmly welcomed back by president Helen Colliver at the Moonta and District Probus Club meeting on September 1.

President Helen also acknowledged several members celebrating special occasions during September.

Congratulations went to Jan and Bruce Oxley on their wedding anniversary, and birthday wishes were extended to John Hounslow, Penny Richter, Marlene Thatcher and Shirley Arney.

Richard Bastian shared plans for a three-day trip to Peterborough in late October, with 23 members set to enjoy historical tours of the iconic former railway town.

Lucky number prizes on the day went to Mal Coleman, Denis Healy and Rosina Gould.

The guest speaker for the meeting was Jane McCauley, who gave a heartwarming presentation about her involvement in the Story Dogs

Jane spoke passionately about how specially trained dogs help young students gain confidence and improve their

Together with her late colleague Sally Hackett and their Labrador Retrievers, Jane began working with reluctant young readers.

The program's early development was supported through sponsorships from the late Lorraine Darling, of Moonta, and the local Lions Club, and soon revealed the calming and encouraging effect of reading aloud to a dog.

Moonta Area School staff have also been strong supporters of the program.

The dogs are carefully trained, with the help of Adelaide-based instructors.

Iane explained that reading to a dog helps children feel less judged and more at ease.

Some students even gain confidence simply by sitting next to the dog and gently patting it while reading aloud. She emphasised that the safety of both child and animal is par-

The program now operates across several Yorke Peninsula schools and involves a team of dedicated volunteers.

Jane shared a video showcasing the dogs, students and teachers in action, giving Probus members a touching insight into the impact of the initiative.

Retired educator Doug Warmington delivered the vote of thanks, describing Jane's presentation as informative and delightful.

The next Moonta and District Probus Club meeting will be held on Monday, October 13, and will mark the club's 33rd birthday. Popular local group Just Mates will provide entertainment.

Mumford, Trengove stand out at Eagles junior awards

Peter Argent REPORT BY

Wallaroo's Jack Mumford (Under 18) and Bute's Will Trengove (U16) were recognised as two of the standout Yorke Peninsula talents at the Woodville-West Torrens junior awards night, held at the Oval Avenue clubrooms on Friday, September 19.

Mumford's consistency and impact earned him the U18 most improved trophy, and Trengove was the U16 runner-up best and fairest, despite playing only 11 games with the Eagles.

He's a ripper lad popular with his peers and determined to become the best footballer he can be.

- Shane Reardon,

Playing a crucial role in attack for the U18s, Mumford kicked 30 goals from 19 games across the 2025 campaign, including a fivegoal haul against Norwood and five additional three-goal performances.

A strong-marking key forward, Mumford averaged 5.4 marks and 11.1 disposals per game while playing predominantly at centre

Eagles U18s exited the premiership race after a preliminary final loss to eventual premiers Sturt.

Coach Shane Reardon said Mumford's season was a testament to his dedication.

"Jack missed nearly all of the 2024 season with hamstring and back issues — he only played two games late in the year," Reardon said.

"He committed to a full preseason, travelling from YP to Adelaide three times a week and attending several optional Saturday sessions.

"He rarely missed a training and built a strong base for a big season." Reardon also highlighted Mumford's attitude and game sense.

'Jack has a real drive to improve, he takes feedback on board and applies it to his game.

"He led the league in contested marks and was fifth overall for total marks.

"Jack also had 22 score assists, showing how team oriented his game is; he rotated between deep forward and a roaming forward role throughout the season."

Reardon added: "On top of that, he's a ripper lad — popular with his peers and determined to become the best footballer he can be."

Trengove impresses

Will Trengove - brother of SA U18s women's captain Imogen Trengove — delivered a standout season in a challenging year for the WWT U16s, who finished at the bottom of the ladder.

A busy, ball-winning rover known for his hard work around the contest, he averaged 19.3 disposals, 2.1 marks, 2.8 tackles and 3.8 clearances per game, demonstrating consistent output and effort.

SANFL U18... Jack Mumford of Wallaroo has been named Woodville-West Torrens' Under 18 Most Improved player for the 2025 season.

Klau, Horjus and Austin selected in Diamonds squad

Three South Australian netballers with Yorke Peninsula connections have earned national selection for the Australian Diamonds' upcoming international series against South Africa and New Sarah Klau (NSW Swifts), origially from Yorketown, brings valuable experience to the Diamonds' defensive line-up.

Named in both the South Africa

Series and Constellation Cup squads, Klau will join Courtney Bruce, Matilda Garrett and Ash Ervin in defence.

Georgie Horjus (Adelaide Thunderbirds), who has family connects with Bute and Ardrossan, also features in both squads, highlighting her development as a key attacking option for the Diamonds.

She will be part of a strong shooting circle that includes Kiera

Austin, Cara Koenen and Sophie

Lucy Austin (GIANTS Netball), who has family ties with the Bute community, has been selected for the South Africa Series as an elevated invitee and potential debutant.

The South Africa Series begins on Saturday, October 4, in Bendigo, with the Constellation Cup to follow later in the month.

A look back at past premiers

Peter Argent REPORT BY

As part of Peter Argent's All the Fives retrospective, featuring Yorke Peninsula's A grade football premiers over the past five decades, this week's focus is on 2005, when Moonta won its first premiership since 1963.

YPFL 2005 — Moonta

Moonta Football Club's breakthrough YP Football League A grade flag in 2005 broke a 42-year drought.

Coach was Justin "Yoda" Zwar, Clay Elsworthy captained the side and future Mail Medallist (2008) Ricky Mackereth was vice-captain.

Zwar recalls how special the premiership was after overcoming one of Moonta's NYP rivals, Paskeville.

"Paskeville beat us three times during the year. We were the underdogs, with Pasky certainly being the team to beat," he said.

Although Moonta lost to Paskeville in the qualifying final, they progressed to the grand final, where they had the advantage of playing at home.

> 1975, 1985, 1995, 2005 and 2015 premiers

"We were five goals down on grand final day just before half-time, and things weren't that happy in the coaches' box. The momentum changed just before the break when we kicked a couple of goals?

The Demons seized the ascendancy in the third quarter and went on to win a high-scoring affair, 17.21 (123) to 14.12 (96).

"From my perspective, it was the most nostalgic game for the club and my career — it was a pinnacle for me from a coaching perspective," Zwar said.

'The celebrations went for a couple of weeks.

"It was a unique bunch of fellas who were a pretty tightknit group.

"We had every player come along to the 10-year reunion (in 2015) and have only lost one of the 20, Pat Liddicoat."

Adam Forth, the Demons' full forward, kicked five goals and was rewarded with best-on-ground honours. Not far behind him was Zeb Drogemuller across half-back, who stood out as a dashing, running defender in the win. Rohan Bock, captain of the Moonta senior colts that season, and youngster Tom Ferguson also had an impact in the Derek Newchurch was shifted to centre half-back late in the regular season and proved to be an outstanding performer in that role.

Brad Smith claimed Moonta's best and fairest in 2005; he originally came from Western Australian club Claremont and had AFL experience with Collingwood and Richmond, spending five years on their lists from 1996 to 2000.

Smith played one single senior game in his final year, and also donned a jumper with Glenelg in the SANFL.

"I felt we had control of the result with about 10 minutes to go and could start to enjoy the victory," Zwar said.

"The trio of Lyndon Elsworthy, Gavin Appleton and Jarrod "Jack" Woodward had all been stalwarts of Demons.

"For eight-time Port Adelaide Magpies premiership defender, Paul Northeast, it was his last game of A grade football, so he also went out on a high.

"Trevor Keast was the president at the time.

"That '05 flag changed the culture of the Moonta Football Club.

Basketballers launch jersewundraiser

Harry Rennie REPORT BY

Players in Kadina's Inclusive Basketball program, run in partnership with the Copper Coast Sport and Leisure Centre, are calling on the community to help fund new team jerseys through a bottle and can drive, to be held October 13 to 19.

CCSLC manager Giles Ellis said jerseys cost about $50 each, with the aim being to provide every player with their own to build pride and a stronger sense of team identity.

"Our plan is to raise funds through a bottle and can drive, and we're inviting the whole community to join in," Ellis

"It's a great way to engage the players, raise funds and involve the wider community.

"Most importantly, it gives the players a real sense of ownership and pride."

Bins will be placed throughout the CCSLC to collect eligible bottles and cans. Players will help sort and return containers through the Container Deposit Scheme, with all refunds going directly toward the jersey fund.

Coach Kym Lamshed said the program was created to provide a supportive environment for players who may not otherwise have had the chance to join traditional teams.

"We aim to give them a chance to play as a team and learn simple skills that will not only help in basketball, but also in life," Lamshed said.

"Some of our players couldn't catch a ball when they started.

"Now they're scoring confidently and working together."

The program welcomes players of all ages and meets every Wednesday at the CCSLC.

Each session includes skills development followed by a friendly game.

Team member Jake Glasson, a regular at the sessions, said his favourite part was the game - and the potato crisps after-

"I love to shoot the granny shot from long range," Jake said with a big smile.

"I've made heaps of friends

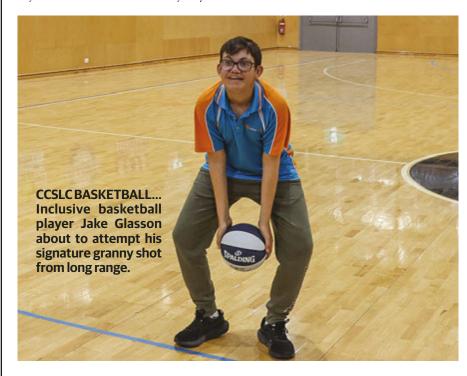

While the program is currently focused on the Copper Coast, Lamshed hopes it can expand to nearby communities and eventually organise semi-competitive games.

"Our players would love the chance to compete, represent their community and just keep growing," he said.

The CCSLC is encouraging all community members to support the drive and help the inclusive team step out in new

AFLW

In a controversial finish, a late free kick proved decisive in Port Adelaide's fivepoint loss to Geelong at Alberton Oval on Saturday afternoon.

With seven minutes remaining, Amelie Borg was penalised for a deliberate rushed behind in a scrappy contest. The free kick set up the final goal of the game to hand the Cats a 6.9 (45) to 6.4 (40) win in wet, wintry weather.

For Port, Shineah Goody (Edithburgh) kicked an early second-term goal but overall had a quieter-than-usual outing.

She finished with eight disposals (seven kicks), a mark, six tackles, three clearances and 140 metres gained.

Last year's preliminary finalists now sit with just two wins from six games at the halfway mark of the season.

They face St Kilda this Sunday at Moorabbin Oval (RSEA Park).

Adelaide stormed home in the final quarter, kicking six unanswered goals to defeat Gold Coast by 16 points in Queensland on Facing a likely loss at three-quarter time, the Crows turned the match around with a dominant final term to secure their fourth win of the season, 7.8 (50) to 5.4 (34).

Port Vincent's Chelsea Biddell was a standout in defence, collecting 14 disposals (11 kicks), a mark, two tackles and 341 metres gained.

Crows now sit in fourth place and will face the Sydney Swans this Sunday afternoon. Meanwhile, Port Adelaide remains at 13th.

Caleb Poulter (Ardrossan) joined the ranks of VFL premiership players on Sunday afternoon, helping Footscray secure a thrilling 10-point victory over Southport at Ikon Park.

Poulter finished with a goal in the win, while former Bute junior Boyd Woodcock suffered his third grand final defeat in four years with the Sharks.

More on this in next week's edition.

SANFL League

Glenelg and forward Lachlan Hosie (Yorketown connections) fell short in the 2025 SANFL League grand final, finishing runners-up to a dominant Sturt outfit on Sunday afternoon.

The Double Blues secured their 16th premiership with a 31-point win at Adelaide Oval, defeating Glenelg 16.9 (105) to 11.8

Hosie was a standout in the Bays' forward line, kicking 5.1 as part of a three-pronged attack. The 2023 Jack Oatey Medallist also collected 12 disposals and five marks including two contested — in a strong solo effort up forward.

WNBA

Steph Talbot (Kadina) saw limited action during the WNBA playoffs, appearing in just one game for the New York Liberty in their first-round series against the Phoenix Mercury.

In the September 17 loss, 60-86, Talbot was on court for nine minutes and did not register any statistics. After an even opening term, the Mercury pulled away to claim a dominant 26-point win.

Talbot did not feature in the other two games of the series, which included a Liberty victory in game 1 and a series-ending loss in game 3.

Since joining the Liberty midseason, Talbot averaged 2.9 points, 2.7 rebounds and 1.7 assists per game from limited min-

Originally selected by the Golden State Valkyries in the 2025 Expansion Draft, Talbot is expected to return to the Adelaide Lightning for the 2025-26 WNBL season.

She is set to continue in her role as captain under a refreshed leadership structure.

Hawkins stands tall in SANFL Futures Game

Peter Argent REPORT BY

Broughton-Mundoora ruck Jayden Hawkins delivered a standout performance in the annual SANFL Under 17s Futures Game, played as the curtain-raiser on grand final day at Adelaide Oval on Sunday, September 22.

The match featured the best U17s talent from across South Australia, giving AFL Draft hopefuls a high-profile opportunity to showcase their skills.

Team Blue and Team Yellow were selected by the SANFL talent department, with the game preceding the SANFL reserves grand final.

Team Blue recorded a dominant 66point win, defeating Team Yellow 14.9 (93) to 4.5 (29).

Hawkins, who played for North Adelaide's U18s this season, kicked two goals and was named among Team Blue's

The SANFL will now select an U18s Academy squad, with Hawkins expected to be firmly in contention as he prepares for the biggest year of his football journey.

Also making an impact in the Futures Game was midfielder Jim Kelly (Bute/ Mundoora connections), who led from the front for Team Yellow, playing through the midfield and finishing as his team's top performer.

He split his 2025 season between Norwood's U18s and St Peter's College.

Eagles fight hard but Roosters show their class

"Eagle Eye" REPORT BY

Broughton-Mundoora B grade faced the undefeated Crystal Brook Roosters in the Northern Areas Football Association B grade grand final at Jamestown on Saturday.

With a couple of key injury concerns, Eagles coach Bart Joyce reshuffled his line-up, hoping to keep the game close and use his side's youth and run on the wide-open spaces of Victoria

In cool but near-perfect weather, the game began in typical B grade fashion, with the first 10 minutes full of stoppages and contested play.

Eagles were well led early by veterans Strath Roberts and Angus Johns, but they missed a couple of chances mid-quarter.

Crystal Brook eventually broke through, moving the ball cleanly to kick two goals in quick succession and take a 14-point lead into the first break.

Broughton-Mundoora lifted in the second quarter, attacking the northern end with a slight breeze. Jordan Townsend was rewarded for a strong tackle and converted truly, before the imposing Tex Sims added another to swing momentum. But injuries to defender Thomas Price and utility Kienan Sims proved costly, and the Roosters steadied to add their third goal late in the term.

The Eagles trailed by just 10 points at halftime, and the flag remained up for grabs.

The third quarter lived up to its reputation as the premiership quarter. With Max Marchant ruled out after dislocating his elbow, Broughton-Mundoora were left stretched. The Roosters capitalised, piling on seven un-answered goals. The only highlight for the Eagles came from T Sims, who landed a crunching tackle, won a free kick and slotted his second.

Joyce urged his players not to give in, but the gap was too wide. The final quarter was evenly matched, with both sides adding two goals. For Broughton-Mundoora, Saxon Tod showed his class with a goal, while ruckman Christopher Button surprised with a rare but accurate conversion.

In the end, Crystal Brook's dominance across the season was reflected in a 49-point victory. Liam Dreaver was named best on ground for his quality possessions and three goals.

It capped off a huge day for the Roosters, who also claimed the A grade and Senior colts premierships to complete a Jamestown trifecta in red and white.

Driver Wayne Hill guided the 6-year-old mare to victory, though he was far from satisfied with his own performance.

"It was a shocker," Hill said, apologising to the Linkes despite steering Coco Mia to a narrow half-head win over Sunstar, with Euro Beat finishing third.

After settling one-out, oneback, Hill elected to take the sprint lane, urging Coco Mia home in a grinding finish. "If I had stayed in the run-

Excitement building for the peninsula's biggest event

Michelle Daw JOURNALIST

THERE'S only a week to go before the start of the 2025 Yorke Peninsula Field Days — the region's biggest event — and the huge site at Paskeville is a hive of Volunteers and staff are busy preparing for the biennial event, to be held from Tuesday, September 30 to Thursday October 2.

To help find your way around, today's YP Country Times includes the 96-page official souvenir guide to the YP Field Days, including maps, programs, and information about exhibitors and the many free events and attractions on offer.

Just over 500 exhibitors will showcase their goods and services in categories covering all aspects of the grain industry, through to trucks, tractors and tools to general interest categories such as automotives, arts and crafts, education, clothing, and general merchandise.

The Guest Speaker Centre will offer fashion shows and cooking demonstrations and appearances by children's author and literacy advocate Mem Fox, local novelist Tricia Stringer, and internationally recognised rose expert Gavin Woods.

Learn the story of wool in the Murray Allen Wool and Sheep Pavillion, where you will find shearing demonstrations, junior sheep and wool judging competitions, activities for younger children and wool fashion parades.

The Green Plains Track is a great way to discover family-friendly exhibitors, for a day of fun and exploration.

Children can collect exclusive giveaways at each of the 16 participating exhibitors, including the SES and SA

Also participating will be the Yorke Peninsula Country Times at site 11 in the Grant Pavilion, where you will be able to buy next week's edition, pick up extra copies of the YPFD Official Guide or Yorkes Magazine, and see samples of commercial printing by YPCT Print.

A must-see on the Green Plains Track will be the Ag Learning Centre, coordinated by Kadina Memorial School and ag teachers from across the state, offering hands-on and virtual reality experiences to spark interest in future careers in agriculture.

The youngest visitors to the field days can enjoy the all-new Little Farmers Zone, where they can connect and play through activities such as earning a "tractor" licence, digging for fresh potatoes, milling their own grain from local wheat, or throwing a fleece like a roustabout in a shearing shed.

Other free attractions with a strong rural flavour will including demonstrations by the YP Blacksmiths and Lost Skills Association, a tractor pull run by Mundoora Progress Association, displays at the Malv Haynes Vintage Machinery Centre, and even a rare 1909 steam traction engine, which will slowly move into action to reach a top speed of 5 kilometres an hour.

Some of Australia's much admired working dogs and their handlers will test their skills in daily trials by putting three sheep through a series of obstacles within 15 minutes.

Tickets to the field days can be bought online for $22 per adult for one day and $5 for children; tickets will also be available at the event, via cash or credit card, for $25 per adult for one day and $5 for

People are encouraged to buy online to save lining up at the gates. For ticket sales, go to www.ypfielddays.com.au.

WHEELY GOOD... Brothers Cooper and Harvey Schultz get into the spirit of the 2023 YP Field Days. There will be plenty of attractions for all the family at the 2025 field days.

Annual Hart Field Day attracts big crowd

MORE than 600 farmers, researchers, industry representatives and students converged on the Hart field site near Blyth on Tuesday, September 16, for the annual Hart Field Day.

Hart Field-Site Group chair, Snowtown farmer Glen "Chip" Wilkinson said the event provided an excellent opportunity for people in the grain industry to see and hear about the latest agronomy trials, and gather with like-minded people.

"The general attitude for the day was just fantastic," he said.

"After the season we had last year, I think people are keen to get off the farm and see what the rest of the state has got on offer, and they're very aware that they need the social interaction."

Mr Wilkinson acknowledged that, while not all areas of South Australia had received rain, growers across most of the local area were cautiously optimistic about the upcoming harvest.

"It could go anywhere from here this season, we're not out of the woods, but if it's going to turn out alright, we've got everything we need so far," he said.

"I've stated we still need 50 millimetres of rain, and I'll stick by that.

"But we'll certainly get a harvest this year, the headers will run for the better part of the Mid North or the Hart catchment area, that's nearly a

"There's a lot of things going in our favour, as long as it stays cool and the weather keeps moving, it looks like we're going to be okay."

Visitors packed into 20 rolling sessions across the trial site, with researchers and industry experts sharing updates and answering questions, while static displays provided further insights.

Good weather for the event was a welcome relief after the hot and windy weather on Monday, September 18, when the site was being set up.

"To back it up with the full-day field day on Tuesday, I know it did take a lot out of people and we're just really grateful for their work," Mr Wilkinson said.

Growers won't have to wait long to have another look at the Hart trial site, with the Spring Twilight Walk scheduled for 5pm on Tuesday, October 21.

"It's a great chance to see how the trials are faring about a month down the track - right on the dawn of harvest," Mr Wilkinson said.

THREATS... Agronomist Steven Tilbrook says two of the greatest risks to Australian grain markets are weed seed contamination and chemical residues. PHOTO: CBH Group

Kill weeds and stay below residue limits

AUSTRALIAN farmers must remain vigilant to ensure grain is produced within chemical residue limits, CBH Group agronomist Steven Tilbrook says.

He said Australia had an excellent reputation for producing clean, nutritious grain, with up to 65 per cent of the 47 million tonnes produced each year being exported.

However, weed seed contamination and chemical residues remain the two biggest risks to export markets.

'Farmers are doing a great job on both fronts," Mr Tilbrook said.

"As new products and use patterns come to market, it is important that growers and agronomists continue to follow label requirements to avoid residue issues in grain for human or animal consumption.

"When grain is residue-free, marketers can access more markets and often attract premium prices."

Testing for residues occurs at multiple points in the supply chain, with equipment sensitive enough to detect 0.01 milligrams per kilogram — about 10 grains of wheat in a 50-tonne truckload.

Every chemical registered for use in Australia has a maximum residue limit (MRL), but those limits may differ from importing countries.

"Adhering to herbicide label instructions and avoiding spray drift is the best way to minimise the risk of contamination and having a load rejected overseas, which could cause extensive damage to the industry," Mr Tilbrook said.

Labels now include specific residue management restraints in addition to directions for use.

He encouraged growers to adopt the WeedSmart Big 6 integrated weed management framework to keep weed numbers low and make it easier to deliver grain with low or nil residues.

As an example, Mr Tilbrook pointed to the European Union's decision to halve the MRL for haloxyfop in canola.

While most canola delivered to CBH in Western Australia was meeting the national standard, some loads would have exceeded the EU requirement. CBH advised growers to adjust their practices, such as limiting haloxyfop use, reducing application rates, and applying only at the two-leaf stage.

By the time the new standard took effect, all stocks in the supply chain were compliant.

In another case, the EU MRL for paraquat in lupins is one-fiftieth of the Australian limit.

Paraquat can be an effective seed sterilisation tool, but Mr Tilbrook urged growers to use it only when necessary and with care to avoid yield impacts and residue breaches.

He said applying paraquat at higher rates or too early to target weeds could raise the risk of exceeding the EU MRL and reduce lupin yields. If wild radish was present, alternative herbicide options should be considered.

He also advised avoiding paraquat spray drift onto nearby canola crops, particularly in spring, and ensuring sprayers are thoroughly cleaned after use.

When paraquat is used as a harvest aid, he recommended applying the lowest label rate and delaying application until 80 per cent leaf drop to protect yield and keep residue levels within the EU MRL.

Full clearance and solid average at Jandebrey

Michelle Daw
JOURNALIST

JANDEBREY White Suffolks stud achieved full clearance of all 56 rams at its annual sale last week and an average price of $998, despite tough seasonal conditions.

The sale was held on September 17 at Maitland Showgrounds and attracted 17 registered buyers.

The top-priced ram was bought for $1500 by Malcolm Redding from Redding Family Trading.

The impressively large ram was a late May 2024 drop sired by Wingamin 20/2707, purchased by Jandebrey proprietors Geoff and Tania Stock at the 2021 on-property sale at Wingamin White Suffolks, Karoonda.

"He is a big, roomy ram and well grown," Mr Redding said. "I have been buying Jandebrey rams for 15 years —

Volume buyer of the sale was Roger Johns of ST Johns and Sons, Tiparra, who took away a dozen rams, despite not registering as a buyer initially.

they are good value buying."

"I didn't intend to buy today, but the rams presented so well, we decided to buy some," he said.

The rams will go to Glendinning Station, north of Hamilton, Victoria, where Mr Johns's son Nick produces prime lambs.

"We have run White

Suffolks as terminal sires in the past, then we brought in Dorsets," he said.

"We don't have any White Suffolks at the moment but we have decided to try them again."

Jandebrey co-proprietor Tania Stock said she and her husband Geoff were very pleased with the sale result.

"We had a full clearance and a solid average price," she said.

"We presented an even line-up of rams throughout the sale and the prices reflect that.

"Coming off a dry year, that's a really pleasing result.

"Obviously, there are people in the lamb business who are still confident about lamb prices."

TOP RAM... With the top-priced ram sold at the annual Jandebrey White Suffolks sale are Harrison Stock from Jandebrey, buyer Malcolm Redding, Julian Burke from Nutrien Ag, Tony Clark from Wardle Co, and stud proprietors Tania and Geoff Stock.

Highest ever average at Anna Villa

Michelle Daw JOURNALIST

ANNA Villa White Suffolks at Weetulta achieved an average price of $1242 — its highest ever — at its 63rd annual on-property ram sale on Friday, September 19.

The top priced price ram sold for $2600 to Wayne and Samuel Young, of River Park Farming, who run about 4000 Merino crossbreds at Butlers Bridge, south of Port Pirie.

The Young family have been customers of the stud for more than 10 years and Samuel said they chose the ram for its impressive size, conformation and growth rates.

The May 2024 drop ram was the heaviest of the 88 rams up for sale, weighing in at 137.5 kilograms and measuring in the top 5 per cent of 2025 Lambplan figures for weaning weight and in the top 10 per cent for post weaning weight.

The biggest volume buyer Kuruman Pastoral

Company of Bowmans, which took home a dozen rams.

All but three of the 88 rams penned sold at auction.

Anthony and Suzanne Ferguson donated the sale proceeds from one of their Anna Villa rams to the Royal Flying Doctor Service and Heartkids.

The donation was made in recognition of the care provided by Heartkids to their granddaughter, Madeline Litchfield, who had two major heart operations as a newborn, and the services provided by RFDS to other family mem-

The charity ram was bought by Clements Farming Group, Narridy, for $1800.

Mr Ferguson said the sale went exceptionally well and had attracted some new clients from beyond Yorke Peninsula, as well as those on the peninsula who had not bought rams for the past two years.

"It went beyond our expectations because with the limited numbers of sheep on Yorke Peninsula, we didn't know how we would go," he

"I think having a smaller number of rams in the shed and a better-quality line-up probably made a big difference because there was not a 'tail' that we've had other years."

Mr Ferguson said there had been a dramatic fall in flock numbers around Australia because of the drought and trend towards cropping only.

The resulting lack of supply meant current strong lamb prices looked set to continue.

The National Trade Lamb Indicator shows lamb prices are 1150 cents/kilogram for mid-September, compared with just under 850c/kg at the same time in 2024 and under 450c/kg in 2023.

"Anybody who has managed to stay in sheep and keep their ewe numbers up will make money out of lambs over the coming two to three years," Mr Ferguson said.

You can rely on Elders.

OPTUS OUTAGE: Three people died and hundreds of emergency calls failed during an Optus Triple Zero (000) outage. In South Australia, a 68-year-old Queenstown woman and an eight-week-old Gawler West baby died, but SAPOL has said the latter death was unlikely to have been caused by the outage.

PALESTINE: Australia has formally recognised Palestine as a sovereign state, joining the UK and Canada, and more than 150 other nations. The recognition is conditional on Hamas not governing, Palestine recognising Israel's right to exist, and commitments to elections and governance reform.

FREE SPEECH: Former Washington Post columnist Karen Attiah says she was fired over posts on gun violence and racial inequality after US conservative activist Charlie Kirk's death. Jimmy Kimmel's show was suspended for his commentary on the assassination, while an SA Police officer is under investigation for a related social media post.

AFL's night of nights

LAST night (Monday), the AFL held its Brownlow Medal count, recognising the league's best and fairest player.

Ás an avid AFL fan, I enjoy tuning in each year to see which players poll surprise votes, and which miss out despite strong performances.

The Brownlow night also celebrates other season awards, including Mark and Goal of the Year, the Rising Star award, and the Jim Stynes Community Leadership Award, given to the player making the biggest impact off the field.

This year. Western Bulldogs forward Sam Darcy won Mark of the Year while Gold Coast captain Noah Anderson claimed Goal of the Year.

Brisbane Lions defender Harris Andrews won the Jim Stynes Community Award for his work with Beyond DV, supporting people affected by domestic and family violence. The count itself was dominated by Gold Coast star midfielder Matt Rowell, who surged to an early lead with 20 votes in the first nine rounds. including six best-on-ground performances.

He went on to finish with 39 votes, seven clear of runner-up Collingwood midfielder Nick Daicos. As always, attention also turned to the red carpet, with viewers weighing in on the fashion of Mardi Dangerfield was a standout in a green dress alongside husband Geelong midfielder Patrick Dangerfield. Arlette Amor, partner of favourite Daicos, wore a look styled by Lana Wilkinson, fresh from New York Fashion Week. Charli Wheeler wore a dress made of grey feathers, attending with her partner, Gold Coast Suns captain Noah Anderson.

Geelong midfielder Bailey Smith, already a headline-maker in 2025, drew more attention by wearing sunglasses on the red carpet.

#Throwback This day in history

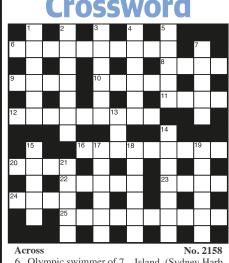

September 23, 1846: Astronomer Johann Gottfried Galle became the first person to observe the planet Neptune, the existence of which had been mathematically predicted by John Couch Adams and Urbain-Jean-Joseph Le Verrier, in September 1845 and June 1846, respectively.

September 23, 1980: Jamaican musician Bob Marley, especially known for popularising reggae, performed his last concert in Pennsylvania. He died of cancer the following year.

UNBORN ADOPTION AGENCY: The Bible says there is only one way into the kingdom of light, and Christ Jesus is that door. The choice of abortion opens the door into the kingdom of darkness, a darkness beyond our comprehension; so horrifying, I really don't want to talk about it. There is a podcast called God's Voice Today, where people give testimony to their near-death experiences. These people are real. Their experiences are real. Closing your eyes will not keep you safe from the darkness. Knowledge is a weapon, so get some knowledge. God's Voice Today podcast can help you understand spiritual death. Do not open your door to the darkness. Choose a different path for your unborn baby. Have mercy, choose unborn adoption. Judge not lest ye be judged. Love does not condemn. Love corrects with mercy and compassion. Love finds a way - unborn adoption. All who are without fault throw the first stone. Contact Rev, unbornadoptionagency@gmail. com. I love you all.

HOT FISHING TIPS

with Greg James www.gregjamesfishing.com.au

Welcome to the column with all the hot tips for fishing around Yorke Peninsula; contact Greg by email at greg@ gregjamesfishing.com.au.

Wallaroo: Jetty-based anglers picked up a couple of small squid and salmon trout before the strong northerlies set in last week, with light showers on Sunday. Gar and sprat tommy ruff (Australian herring) are north of Point Riley, and legal-size King George whiting are reported at the Ballast grounds.

Moonta Bay/Port Hughes: Squid made a very welcome return to local waters, especially when the winds turned west around the 10-12 knot mark. Blue swimmer crabs are yet to appear as fishers adopt a wait-and-see attitude regarding the ongoing algal bloom. Whiting catches remained slow but steady from the clear, deep-water drops off Cape Elizabeth.

Port Victoria/Point Turton: The Balgowan, Port Victoria and Hardwicke Bay grounds are producing KG whiting in the late afternoon with last week's very high tides. Fresh, soft squid is the bait of choice, and a berley bomb is recommended. Small leatherjackets and early trumpeters are also active. Local jetty and shore-based fishing remains slow. Garfish are off Point Souttar and The Pines.

Stenhouse Bay/Marion Bay: Big salmon (4kg-5kg) are being caught from Wanna and Sleaford beaches at Port Lincoln, and these fish are expected to move into the bottom end soon. Beaches with a sandy, deep drop-off from shore are the best starting point. Browns and Richards beaches hold salmon trout, while boat crews heading out for red nannygai, KG whiting and big flathead.

Tight lines and see you next week!

YPFL & YPNA

Peter Argent REPORT BY

KADINA footballer Mitchell Harris has been selected to play in the under 17 AFL National Futures Boys match at the Melbourne Cricket Ground on AFL grand final day this Saturday, September 27.

The match will feature two teams comprising the most talented U17 players from across the nation.

Players selected for this match are considered prospects for the 2026 AFL Draft, although future selection is not guaranteed.

Harris's call-up came yesterday (Monday, September 22).

"It is very exciting news, I'm stoked," Harris told the YP Country Times.

"I received a message on my phone from AFL national talent manager Tarkyn Lockyer telling me to give him a call after my classes.

"When I rang him back, he gave me the good news."

The 194cm, 82kg Yorke Peninsula product has played primarily as a marking defender this season.

"It has been a consistent season, especially the back half of the year from a personal perspective," Harris said.

"Back at Kadina I played through the midfield, but since I've been in town I've played in defence for both the Eagles and Prince Alfred College."

Harris is currently in year 11 at Prince Alfred College and preparing for exams in week six of next term.

The AFL Futures squad will gather for a two-day camp in Melbourne from Friday, September 26, with the match to be played at 9.35am on grand final day.

Players were nominated by state talent programs, national selectors and AFL club recruiters. Some participants will go on to be selected for the 2026 AFL National Academy.

Past SANFL representatives in the Futures match include Tom Luck (Central Yorke) and Kade Herbert (Bute), who played in the 2023 edition before the AFL grand final between Collingwood and Brisbane.
